2. Your Right to a Free Copy of the Report

Under federal law, you have the right to obtain a free copy of the consumer report from the consumer reporting agency named above if you request it within 60 days of receiving this notice.

To request the report, contact the consumer reporting agency directly using the phone number or website above. You will need to provide identifying information to verify your identity.

3. Your Right to Dispute the Accuracy of the Report

You have the right to dispute the accuracy or completeness of any information in the consumer report, directly with the consumer reporting agency. If you dispute the information, the consumer reporting agency must investigate (usually within 30 days) and correct or delete any information that is inaccurate, incomplete, or cannot be verified.

A summary of your rights under the federal FCRA is included with this notice.

Recordkeeping

PureTask shall retain in the applicant file, for not less than 5 years after the date of adverse action:

1. The signed FCRA Disclosure and Authorization (Document 07);
2. The consumer report received from the CRA;
3. Internal individualized-assessment notes (if applicable);
4. The Pre-Adverse Action Notice (Document 07A) and any response;
5. The Adverse Action Notice (Document 07B);
6. Proof of delivery for both notices;
7. Any subsequent communications.

These records are essential for defending against FCRA claims (which have a 2-year statute of limitations from discovery, 5-year statute of repose under 15 U.S.C. § 1681p) and ICRAA claims (similar limitations).

This is a general template. It is not legal advice. The FCRA adverse action workflow is highly regulated; please have a licensed FCRA attorney review this notice and your operational practices before using it in production. Background-check vendors (Checkr, Sterling, GoodHire) typically provide their own adverse action notice templates and automated workflows — use the vendor's form when available and confirm it covers all California-specific protections.
